“The History of Rap Music and It’s Impact on American Culture”

Chuckie Campbell is an American musician, poet, fiction writer, editor, publisher, and educator. He holds a Ph.D. in English Literature and Creative Writing from University of Southern Mississippi and is a full-time professor at Bryant & Stratton College. In addition to his academic achievements, he was the winner of the 2014 ALL WNY Music Awards for “Best Hip Hop/Rap Performer” and “Best New Artist,” and he is the founder and editor of Sunsets and Silencers, a print journal for art, literature, and culture.

Recently, Campbell was added to the booking roster of local hip-hop label Deep Thinka Records, while also receiving accolades in the academic world for exceptional creative writing, including the Distinguished Faculty Award for Full-Time Faculty, honoring teachers at Bryant & Stratton College for instructional excellence.

His newly released album "More Die of Heartbreak" has garnered five star reviews and positive press from online and print outlets such as the Huffington Post, The Source, Young Hollywood, The Examiner, and UTG Review. Just months ago, Campbell came off of a national tour of the West and Midwest, booked by Deep Thinka Records. He is currently in the studio working on his next project to be released in 2015.
